

NEW YORK GOSSIP OF THE DAY IN THE WORLD OF SPORTS

STILL UNDER AT GETTING HIT

Three Successive Times the Horsehide Struck Him.

BETTER WORK ALL AROUND Patten Steadied Low and Runs Were Not in Proportion to Hits—Selbach Was Foolish.

It was a brave game, my masters, and while the Senators did not win they did not lose, which is saying a good deal, when it is remembered that they were against the champion Athletics, and are in such bad shape.

A score of 6 to 6 at the end of ten innings is enough to arouse the enthusiasm of the fans, and that the rooters appreciated the valiant efforts of their favorites was shown by the excitement they displayed from the eighth inning to the end.

After that performance Patten steadied, and although he was hit with great power and much vigor by the hired men from Quakerville he pulled himself out of holes that looked deep enough to swallow the whole Washington team.

Three times in succession did the darling Jacob pull off that little trick, it was no ladylike rebuke that he got from the interrupted bunch of leather, either. Stahl's performance yesterday was pretty near perfect, and caused the old-timers to bring up reminiscences of the days when Jennings, Kelley, McGraw, and other members of the old Orioles had a chronic habit of being hit.

His efforts would have been amusing had the effects not been so sad. He popped up the first on right, and the second was just as easy for Davis. The man who could solve the problem concerning who put the notion into Selbach's head that bunting was the proper thing at the time he made his little effort, he could hardly have been foolish with the heat, but there was certainly something wrong, and he should consult an alienist at once.

The young man Thoney again came to the front as a man of parts and a great comfort to the fans. True, he made an error that let in a run, but accidents will happen. In the sixth inning he pitched Murphy at the plate in a manner that was a sight for sore eyes. It was his busy day, anyhow, for he had five outs and an error, a hit and a score, a run, which is not so bad for a senior.

Hoffman, too, was pretty pert, and pursued his usual devious way at the bat. He made one of the two-baggers stored in the game, then promptly struck out twice. He changed his put in his mind more often than a love-child schoolgirl, and he should settle down to a steady diet of hits.

The Swissvale ball team, of Pittsburgh, will play at Atlantic City on August 3 and 4, and will reach Washington Friday, August 5. It would like to hear from the fast semi-professional team having included games for a game on that date.
